Musical Comedy.
Hippodrome..... Carolina Lillies
Photoplays.
Nelson..... The Bondman
Princess..... Liberty
Dixie..... The Piper's Price
Grand..... Years of the Locust.

MISS MARIE EDWARDS, who is the "prima donna" of Armstrong's Carolina Lillies, playing the week at the Hippodrome, got into the spot light at the go-off of last night's show and the audience took one big brace and sat up as though entranced. They were listening to a song artist that for sweetness, perfect harmony and volume was never to be expected in an organization playing small cities at little prices. Her's was the first specialty number on the program and the effect it had upon the audience was lasting. All through the performance a well filled house exhibited unusual enthusiasm. Miss Edwards, as we afterward found out, is a noted Welsh soprano and enjoys a splendid reputation in the larger southern and western cities.

But this excellent musical quality is characteristic of the whole show. The chorus sings with a greater richness of tone and volume than any we can recall. The selections also indicated a cultivated taste and not one of the numbers presented was "raggy."

J. Morton McCoy, a cultured baritone, shared the honors with Miss Edwards for quality work. His "When Night Falls Over the Sea" gave opportunity for a demonstration of the range of his voice and its flexibility was a marked feature. In responding to an encore he sang "When You and I Were Young Maggie," which further proved him the finished artist. Mr. McCoy is well known in Chautauqua circles to which he has devoted his talents for a number of seasons. Until recently he was a member of the original "Quaker City Quartette" and has appeared in all the Nixon & Zimmerman houses in the East. His connection with Carl Armstrong's company is his first musical comedy engagement.

Armstrong, himself, is a burnt-cork artist in a class all his own. His drollery is a pleasing characteristic and he keeps the audience constantly in a state of expectancy. Every utterance or unusual gesture gets a laugh. His "Roll On" song was the high light of his part.

Dave O'Dowd has a high-hat part in which he fits to a nicety, and he dances like a demon. His comedy is "parlor-irish" and very clever. He doesn't wear red whiskers, nor does he do anything so noisy as provoke Easy Wilson to bang the cymbals. He is a talented performer and the audience was liberal in showing its appreciation.

Eddie Birely, the best looking fellow in the crowd, has an excellent voice and in company with Miss Edwards rendered one of the big song hits of the program. The same bill repeats tonight.

A story of intense hatred and untold sacrifices is portrayed in the William Fox production of Hall Caine's "Bondman" which is at the Nelson today. An indolent, ne'er-do-well sort of fellow, Stephen Orr, is married to the daughter of the Governor of Iceland. The wife dies after years of an unhappy married existence leaving a son. The husband marries again and from this union a son is born who, as the play goes is hunted and hated by his half brother and for a good part of the story they are in each other's company without either knowing the identity of the other. Jason loves Greba, daughter of a Maux official. She loves "Sunlocks." She follows him to Iceland and Jason follows both. Jason and "Sunlocks" are both condemned to the sulphur mines. Some strange attraction has drawn them together, and when a premature blast blinds "Sunlocks," Jason, the brother, hoists him on his shoulder and carries him to the capital city.

Jason is declared free, but "Sunlocks" guilty of a more serious crime, is condemned to death. Then Jason receives a terrible blow. He learns from Greba that the man he had rescued from the mine is the hated "Sunlocks." Greba in her extremity begs him to save her loved one, in supreme sacrifice. Jason substitutes himself for the condemned man, and with calm eyes and quiet heart faces the new dawn that is to be his last.

"Truthful Tulliver" for one, at least, was not truthful. He promised to show up at the Dixie yesterday, and he didn't. But his veracity may still be intact after all, as the Dixie management announced today that there was a misunderstanding in the shipping orders and the films in which W. S. Hart is featured, would not arrive until Thursday.

Today "The Piper's Price," a Bluebird screen version of Mrs. Wilson Woodrow's gripping story, is heralded as a headliner. It is one of those problem plays and approaches the "divorce question" from a somewhat different angle.

The final episode of the Liberty serial is being shown at the Princess today. In its rather long run of weeks the picture maintained the unguine interest of many of the theatre's patrons, a great number of whom did not miss a single episode.

In addition to this farewell presentation Ruth Stonehouse is featured in an appealing story called "The Heart of Mary Ann."

CORN HURT TODAY?

Lift your corns or calluses off with fingers and it won't pain you one bit.

Yes! You truly can lift off every hard corn, soft corn or corn between the toes, as well as hardened calluses on bottom of feet without one bit of pain.

A genius in Cincinnati discovered freezone. It is an ether compound and tiny bottles of this magic fluid can now be had at any drug store for a few cents.

Apply several drops of this freezone upon a tender, aching corn or a callus. Instantly all soreness disappears and shortly you will find the corn or callus so shriveled and loose that you lift it off with the fingers. You feel no pain while applying freezone or afterwards. Just think! No more corns or calluses to torture you and they go without causing one twinge of pain or soreness. You will call freezone the magic drug and it really is. Genuine freezone has a yellow label. Look for the yellow label.
